PAGEANT WAS SPECTACULAR

Large Crowd Witnesses Crowning Event in Water Valley. of Commencement Festivities.

An audience which crowded the seating capacity of the large open-air auditorium on the library hill was present Tuesday evening to witness the annual pageant by the school children of the city. Threatening weather which finally resulted in rain did not seem to dim-inish the attendance to any great de-

The pageant given this year was "America, Yesterday and Today," spectacular production in which more than three hundred of the school children of the city participated. The entire program was faultlessly rendered, the spontaniety and unity with which the children played their parts was indicative of most excellent and painstaking direction. The third episode of the pageant was given in an abbreviated form on account of the rain which began falling at the beginning of the episode, all of the folk dances which had been so carefully drilled for having to be omitted.

The entire pageant was under the able direction of Miss Hazel Torhner, who has been a student in Peabody and Ward-Belmont College. The ease with which even the smallest of the tots who took part performed the difficult drills allotted to them showed an infinite amount of skill and patience from an able directress. The fact that the entire pageant was prepared in less than three weeks-only sixteen rehearsals being had-speaks well for the ability of Miss Torhner.

It was given under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers Association and many of the members of this body gave their time and attention to the various details connected with its production. All who were thus instrumental are to be heartily congratulated upon its suc-

As a prelude to the evening's performance the Hunziker Concert Band rendered a short program which was highly appreciated. Only half of the program which it was intended that the band should render could be given on Every part of the evening's program was flawless and the hearty applause given every number showed conclusive-ly the audience's appreciation.

A wedding which came as a surpprise to their many friends was that of Harry Crain and Miss Maurine Brown on last Friday afternoon at three o'clock. Accompanied by Mrs. George Hipstenberg, sister of the bride, Miss Kittie Creed and Luby Roper, they motored to Union City, where the ceremony was performed by the pastor of the First Baptist Church of that city.

The bride is the third daughter of Mrs. C. M. Brown, of this city, and she is a charming and accomplished young lady, her many attractive traits having won for her many friends among the younger set of the city.

The groom is one of the publishers of The Courier, and is a young man of unusual ability. He is a graduate of Bethel College, at Russellville, Ky., receiving his A. B. degree in the class of 1920. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. H. M. Crain, now of Hopkinsville, but formerly of Hickman, where Mr. Crain was pastor of the First Baptist

Returning Sunday afternoon, the newlyweds were the honorees of a delightful six o'clock dinner at the home of the bride's mother, at which a few relatives and close friends were pres-

For the present the happy couple are making their home at the LaClede Hotel but are planning to go to housekeeping in the near future.

BISHOP WOODCOCOK HERE SUNDAY

The Right Reverend Charles E. Woodcock, Bishop of Kentucky, preached to a large and attentive audience at St. Paul's Church at both the morning and evening services Sunday. A large at-tendance is always assured whenever Bishopp Woodcock is to speak here as he is one of the nation's most fluent speakers, and Sunday sermons held his audiences in rapt attention throughout.

EXCURSION MONDAY NIGHT.

The Steamer G. W. Hill, one of the most palacious excursion boats on the river was here Monday, making an ex-cursion trip as advertised, leaving here at nine o'clock and returning at 11:30. A large crowd made the trip and dancing was enjoyed, an excellent orchestra furnishing the music.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Grant and child-ren, Mary Elizabeth and Joseph, and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Wickersham and daughter, Winifrede, of Mayfield, came Friday to visit their parents, the Rev. and Mrs. A. S. Pettie. They attended the jubilee services for their father at the Baptist Church, returning to their homes Monday.

Mrs. Harry Walker, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dodds for the past few week, will leave Friday for her home in BonAir, Tenn. She will be accompanied home by Miss Martha Emily Dodds, who will spend several weeks there.

MASTER'S SERVICE

Jubilee Service at First Baptist Church in Honor of Pastor.

Sunday, May 14, 1922 was a memorable day at the First Baptist Church of Hickman. The occasion was the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the ordination of the pastor, Dr. A. S. Pettie. Half a century of continuous devotion to any legitimate business or profession is commendable but fifty years as an active minister of the gospel is an attainment seldom reached and is far greater than a similar period spent in secular affairs. Surrounded by many beautiful flowers, Dr. Pettie preached at both the morning and evening services. His morning subject was, "What is Your Life?" and that of the evening service, "The Second Coming of Christ." On both occasions he handled his subject well and showed that although his hair is silvery white, his brilliant mind and memory are still in their youth. Notwithstanding the fact that Dr. Pettie has been an ordained minister for fifty years, he is yet not as old as some of our ministers for he began at the age of seventeen and was ordained three years later.

Several visitors from the Mayfield church where Dr. Pettie was pastor for seventeen years, were present and one of them, Mr. J. C. Grant, read a mescage of congratulation sent by that church. Many other letters from his former pastorates and one from C. M. Thompson, Corresponding Secretary of the Mission Board were also read.

The choir and congregation rendered songs sung in the long ago. At the close of the sermon, the doors opened and two little children, Margaret Jo Mitchell and James Allen Mitchell entered carrying a basket of flowers which they presented to Dr. Pettie as a token of appreciation from the Ladies Aid Society. He was also the recipient of many useful gifts.

The church at Hickman thoroughly appreciates Dr. Pettie and his faithful wife and we feel that they are the right people in the right place. It is the hope of the membership that when twentyfive years more have passed, it will be their privilege and pleasure to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Dr. Pet tie's ordination.

MISS MARSHALL THIRD PRIZE WINNER

Miss Mary E. Marshall received last week a letter from Curran Pope, M. D., chairman of the patriotic committee of the Sons of the American Revolution, stating that Miss Marshall's essay in that society's contests had been declared by the judge to be entitled to the third prize. This is an unusual honor, for the contest was a nation wide one, and was entered by young ladies and gentlemen in high schools throughout the country. Miss Marshall graduated in the Class of 1922 of the Hickman High school, being the valedictorian of

MOTHER'S DAY SERVICE.

The special Mother's Day service at the First Methodist Church Sunday morning was largely attended and the program of the occasion, consisting of instrumental and vocal music, readings, etc., was excellently rendered and was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. The program was especially adapted to the occasion which it celebrated. The regular services at night were dismissed in order that the congregation might worship with that of the Baptist Church in the jubilee service for the Rev. A. S. Pettie.

CLEANUP WEEK PRIZES

The Metroplitan Life Insurance Co. offered two prizes of $5.00 each for the best poster and best essay on Cleanup Week. While the interest of the school children in the contest was not as great as was hoped for, many good posters and essays were contributed.

Three disinterested judges were ap-pointed and their decisions were as fol-

The average woman of today is not ntirely a housewife, or what folks have termed a "home body." No, the woman of today is an active force in the community, in the state and in the nation. She is seeking ever to improve herself and the conditions which sur-round her. She has made herself most effectively felt through the medium of her clubs and the work of these clubs. The basic work of woman's work in Hickman is the impelling, co-ordinated efforts of the various woman's clubs. There was a day when a club woman was made the object of many slurring okes, but that day has passed.

The club woman of today is the leader in the community. Her work is a cultural work which is felt in every civic movement. In Hickman there are everal clubs in which woman is given opportunity for self expression.

First of all should be a real virile voman's club, the central organization rom which all other clubs have grown. The woman's club is a dynamite body, central power station, from which he women of the community take their enthusiasm into other organizations, into home life and into public life, social and public health. It is a Democratic organization, too. It is not an autocratic body, organized for the socially elect, nor for those of wealth and osition. It should number women rom every walk of life among its memers-its members women who, because of their mentality, their ability and their interest in the things which womn can do to improve themselves and heir sphere of influence. Perhaps it is art to which you direct our womanly interest. Then the art department would fill this need, where copies of the most famous artists appear from time to time to be studied. We have just had a fine exhibit at the library, but on account of the weather but few attended.

The modern woman has yet another large sphere of study and influencethe field of citizenship. Woman, we know, is now a full fledged citizen, taking an active part in the affairs of the city and the nation. To this side of her development a department of civics will fill the need. Civic affairs were long a woman's work, before she wrested from man her right to an equal place in city improvements and nation-

> Original "Water Wagon." It seems that the phrase "water wagon" started from the large-tanked wagons of the northwest, used in the harvesting season to supply water for the steam engine which runs the threshing machine. No one is more in need of water to drink than laborers of the wheat fields, working under the scorching sun. The workers were prone to hop up on the water wagon to quench their thirst every time the wagon came in. This was obtained from a keg of water kept submerged in the tank to keep it cool.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Harriet Field, twenty-eight years old and heautiful, is the social secretary of the flirtatious Mrs. Isabelle Carter, at "Crownlands," Hichard Carter's home, and governess of 17-year-old Nina Carter. Ward, twenty-four years old and impressionable, fancies himself in love with his mother's attractive secretary. Mrs. Carter's latest "affair" is with young Anthony Pope, and the youth is taking it very seriously.

CHAPTER II .- Presiding over the teacups this summer afternoon, Harriet is profoundly disturbed by the arrival of a visitor, Royal Blondin. Next day, at a tea party in the city, Blondin makes him-self agreeable to Nina, and leaves a deep impression on the unsophisticated girl. CHAPTER III. - Harriet's agitation CHAPTER III. — Harriet's agitation over the appearance of Blondin at "Crownlands" is explained by the fact that he had been a disturbing element in her life ten years before, and she fears him. The man is an avowed adventurer, living on the gullibility of the idle rich. He frankly announces to Harriet his intention of marrying Nina, who, as the daughter of the wealthy Richard Carter, is a highly desirable "catch," and urges her to aid him. She is in a sense in his power, and after pleading with him to abandon his scheme agrees to follow a policy of neutrality. olicy of neutrality.

CHAPTER IV .- Harriet visits her mard sister, Linda Davenport, with whom e had had her home during her unfortunate acquaintance with Blondin, and tells her of his reappearance. The two women, realizing the unscrupulous nature of the man, view the future with appre-

CHAPTER V. - Knowing the tender celling she has inspired in Ward Carter, Harriet is tempted to marry him for the position and wealth he can give her, though realizing she does not love him. Blondin has ingratiated himself with Madame Carter, Richard's mother, and she is whole-heartedly in favor of his marriage with Nina. Ward urges Har-riet to marry him at once. She procras-

CHAPTER VI.-Angered at his wife's CHAPTER VI.—Angered at his wife's too open flirtation with young Anthony Pope, Richard Carter markedly shows his resentment. Isabelle, ardently returning her youthful lover's attachment, elopes with him on his yacht, and pursuit is useless. The news of the sensational affair, exaggerated, of course, by gossip, is kept as much as possible from being public property.

CHAPTER VII. - Ward Carter again arges Harriet to marry him, but she cannot bring herself to an alliance with him opement becomes public. Harriet's ca-tile managing hand is more than ever seded at "Crownlands," and despite the emplications she foresees as inevitable

CHAPTER VIII -Blondin puts pressure CHAPTER VIII—Blondin puts pressure on Harriet to forward his marriage with Nina, but she makes up her mind to defy him. Richard Carter questions her concerning her knowledge of Blondin's intentions, and she counsels active opposition to the match. The family, with Harriet, move to a summer establishment on Long Island.

CHAPTER IX .- In the new home Harwith Nina Harriet endeavors to show her Blondin's unworthiness, but it has little effect on the infatuated girl. On Richard Carter's insistence, Harriet is installed as mistress of the household, but finding her position untenable, declares her intention of leaving. Richard makes an offer of marriers are accounted to the offer of marriage, as a way out of the situation, but Harriet, considering such a thing impossible while Mrs. Carter (though divorced) is still alive, refuses, and leaves the house. To her old-fash-loned ideas, the fact that Richard Carter has been granted a divorce from his arr has been granted a divorce from his err-ing wife does not free him from his mar-ital ties, and marriage with him is im-

CHAPTER X .- At her sister's home CHAPTER X.—At her sister's home Harriet helps to bring her small nephew safely through an attack of diphtheria. Linda cordially approves Harriet's stand on the question of marriage with a divorced man. David Davenport, Linda's brother-in-law, warmly presses his suit, and Harriet has about made up her mind to accept him when Richard Carter appears with the announcement that Isabelle is dead and no obstacle to his marriage with Harriet remains. The girl yields, and the marriage is quietly solemnized. Harriet offers to tell Richard the circumstances of her entanglement with Blondin, but he refuses to listen.

"Scene with Nina about it?" Richard had asked, curiously.

"Nina was not here." Harriet arswered. And there was a faint smile n the deep blue eyes that she raised suddenly to his. "Ah, well, I knew, of course, that

She smiled again, and went quietly to her place. But when he summoned Ward and Nina to his mother's room, after dinner, she had disappeared, and the family was quite alone when he broke the news to them.

Harriet, presently needed again. was astonished at the emotion of the old lady, who had been genuinely fond of her daughter-in-law, and had always been loval to Isabelle, as one of the Carters. Madam Carter was greatly shaken, Nina hysterical, Ward aggrieved, irritated at his own feeling. He had not seen his mother for seven months, she had brought nothing but a certain unpleasant notoriety to her children, yet her death struck both the young creatures forcibly, and they felt shocked and shaken.

"We can't be in the Fordyce tableaux," said Nina in an interval between floods of sobs. "Not that I would want to, now! But I don't know; it seems to me that I am the most unfortunate girl in the world!"

"I think both you and Ward should wear black for a certain period." Richard said to her. He had been walking the floor nervously, stopping now and then beside the great chair where his mother sat silent and stricken, to put his arm about her shoulders, and murmur to her consolingly.

"When my mother died," Madame Carter quavered, with her handkerchief pressed to the tip of her nose, "my sisters and I wore black and refused all social engagements for one year. We then, I remember distinctly, began to wear white and lavender-" Nina broke in pettishly: "I don't see why I have to wear black!" "Why should you?" Ward said with hitter scorn. "It's only your mother!" Nina began to cry.

"You and I will go down to Landmann's early tomorrow, Nina," Harriet suggested, "and we'll have some one show us what is simple and nice -not crape, you know," Harriet said, with a glance at Richard Carter, "but black, for a few months, anyway."

"I think that would be the least, Richard," his mother approved. "I believe I will go with you," she condescended to Harriet, "after all, Isabelle was my daughter-in-law, and the mother of my grandchildren!"

"I suggested it for a few weeks," Richard said, frowning, "but I don't propose to have Nina invite a group of friends. That isn't exactly the idea." "We could ask Mrs. Tabor," Harriet said, soothingly; "It is right in the middle of the season, and perhaps she will feel she can hardly spare the time.

"If I ask her, she'll go," Nina said, in a sulky, confident undertone. Harriet had her doubts, but she did not express them. A month at Nassau, in the undiluted company of Nina and her grandmother, was enough to test arrived. "If just you and I and your dear grandmother were going, dearest girl," she said to Nina, "then it would be perfect. But as long as Miss Field, who is perfectly charming and conscientious and all that, feels that she must accompany us, why-you and I would never be a moment alone, sweetheart, you know that! I don't like to think that it's jealousy-"

"Of course it's jealousy," Nina was pleased to decide, gloomtly. "Granny says that we don't need her, but Father just sticks to it that she must manage everything!"

Ida Tabor smiled automatically. "I don't suppose your father sees anything in Miss Field?" she submitted.

Heavens, no!" Nina said, studying herself in a handglass. There was a rather steely look in the eyes of her friend Ladybird, but she did not see it. Her smile of pleasure gradually gave place to a pout. "I'm going to ask Father if we need Miss Harriet!" she suid.

And that evening she did indeed attack Richard on the subject, although not as decidedly as she had planned

He listened to her interestedly enough, with his evening paper held ready for his next glance. "Let you roam about the country with Mrs. Tabor," he said, as the girl's faltering accents stopped. "No, my dear, it's out of the question! In the first place, she is not the sort of companion I would chooose for any girl, and in the second place I would never know where you and your grandmother were, or what was happening to you! While Miss Field is in charge I shall feel entirely safe. Of course, if Mrs. Tabor chooses to invite herself. that's her affair!"

"Then I don't want to go!" Nina stormed. But in the end she did go. Madame Carter, Nina and Harriet duly sailed, in the second week of January, and Ward joined them almost a month later, in Nassau. And here Harriet had the brother and sister at their best, free to show the genuine childishness that was in them, to swim and pienic and tramp, and here she indulged Nina in long talks, and encouraged her to associate with the young people she met.

Harriet wrote once a week to Richard, making a general report, and inclosing receipted hotel and miscellaneous bills. His communications usually took the form of cables, although once or twice she received typewritten let-

In mid-April they all came home again, and Crownlands, in the year's first shy filming of green, looked wonderful to Harriet's homesick eyes.

Richard was to join them at dinner; It had been impossible for him to meet them when the boat arrived, but Fox had been there and attended to the formalities. It had pleased them all to make the occasion formal and to dress accordingly. Nina looked her prettiest in a white silk, and the old lady was magnificent in diamonds and brocade. Harriet deliberately selected her handsomest gown, a severe black satin that wrapped her slender body with one superb and shining sweep, and left her white arms and firm, flawless shoulders bare. The firm young lines of chin and throat, the swelling white breast that met the encasing satin, the slippers with their twinkling buckles-she could not but and every detail pleasing, and her scarlet mouth, firmly shut, was twitched by a sudden dimple.

She glanced at the clock, went slow ly to the door, and slowly down the children were in the lower hall, and they all glanced up.

Down in the soft glow of light came Harriet, smiling as she slipped her left arm about Nina, and gave the free hand to Nina's father. She was apparently cool and unself-conscious; inwardly she felt feverish, frightened and excited and happy, all at once. Richard was in evening dress, too; he looked his best; his dark hair brushed to a shining crest, and his gray eyes full of pleasure. "Well, Miss Field-!" he said, a little breathlessly. "Well! Your vacation hasn't done you any harm!" "We had to make an occasion of our coming home!" Harriet said, with a nervous laugh, trying not to see the admiration in his eyes. "You look wonderful!" Nina said. "Why, you saw this gown at Nassau," Harriet protested. "Louise-or whoever she was of Prussla, or whatever you call it, turned in the family vault when you walked down these stairs!" Ward said. "Oo-oo-caught you under the mistletoe-oo-oo, you would!" he added, with an effort to envelop her in his embrace.

"Ward, behave yourself!" Harriet said, evading him, and walking toward the dining room with his grandmother, who came downstairs in her turn, and joined them.

Richard Carter watched her, the incarnation of young and beautiful womanhood. Clever he knew her to be, capable and conscientious, but tonight she was in a new role. He liked to see her there at the other end of the table; he realized that she was the center of things, here in his house, and that he had missed her.

After dinner it chanced that Bottomley called her to the telephone, and that a moment later she passed the call on to Richard.

"It's Mr. Gardiner, Mr. Carter. He didn't know that you were here, but he would rather speak to you," Harriet said. Richard went to the telephone, and as she moved to make room for him, and gave him the receiver, he had a sudden breath of the sweetness and freshness of her, of hair and young firm skin, of the rustling satin gown, and the little handkerchief that she dropped, and that he picked up for her. He smiled as he gave it, and flushed inexplicably, and his first few words to the bewudered Gardiner were a little shaken and breathless. But Richard was quite when he sent for Miss Field, and she

"I needn't say that I'm entirely pleased with the way matters have gone, Harriet," said Richard, when she had seated herself on the opposite side of his big, flat desk, and locking her white hands on the shining surface, had fixed her magnificent eyes on htm. "Nina seems in fine shape, and I have never seen my mother better. You seem to have a gentus for managing the Carters. I'm seriously considering an offer from Gardiner; he's got to take his boy out to Nevada for his health. Ward wants to go, and would very probably like it when he got there. I hope he will try it anyhow! So that leaves Nina, who is safe enough with you, and my mother, who seems perfectly well and happy. Meanwhile, while you've been gone, we've gotten the Brazilian company well started, so that I shall have a little more freedom than I've had for

"You look as if you needed it," Harriet observed.

"You look wonderful," Richard returned, simply. "Wonderful! Is that a new gown?

"Well, I had it made last November just before I went away. Mrs. Carter gave me the material a year ago." Harriet glanced down at herself and smiled.

"You might wear pearls-or something-with it," Richard said. "Do you like pearls?"

It was astonishing to see the color come up in her dusky skin; her eyes met his almost pleadingly.

"Why-I never thought!" she said, in some confusion. "I suppose a man may ask his wife if she likes pearls?" Richard said, impelled by some feeling he did not define. He had leaned back in his chair, and half-closed his eyes, as he studied

"Oh-please!" Harriet said in an agony. She gave a horrified glance about, but the library was closed and stlent. "Some one might 2sar you!" she whispered. And a moment later she rose to her feet, and eyed him quietly. "Was that all, Mr. Carter?" she asked. It was Richard's turn to look a trifle confused.

"That's all-my dear!" he said, obediently. The term made her flush again. He was still smiling when she closed the door.

CHAPTER XII. .

It was the gayest spring that Harriet had ever known at Crownlands, for even at her best. Isabelle had been socially an individualist, devoting herself to one man at a time, and to nobody else, and the whole family had tude. Richard had been too busy to notice or protest, the old lady help-in the social atmosphere. Richard began to bring his friends to the house; he was proud of his smoothly running establishment, and proud of the charming woman who neither flirted with nor ignored the men he brought Always beautiful and always busy, constantly in demand on all sides, she went about his house like a smiling worker of miracles, and Richard watched her. When she went home to her sister for a day or two he missed her strangely, and wandered about the empty rooms with a desolate sense of loss.

She was presently back, and amused the young people at the dinner table with a spirited account of her sister's move into a new house-"really an old house," that she and her family had been watching for years.

Nina and Amy and Ward had rushed from the dinner table to an early dance at the club, and Richard, after a talk with his mother on the terrace, had wandered about with a vague hope of finding Harriet somewhere with her book. But she was not downstairs.

He went back, and presently accompanied his mother to her door. The old lady stopped outside of Nina's open door, from which a subdued light streamed.

"Oh, Miss Field-" said Madame Carter.

"Yes, Madame Carter!" The rich. ready voice responded instantly. Richard hoped she would come to the door, but his mother's message was delivered too quickly to make it necessary

"You're waiting up for Nina?" "Oh, yes, Madame Carter!" Harriet answered. The two exchanged goodnights Richard loitered into his mother's room, left her in her maid's hands and went back into the dimly lighted, spacious upper hall. He felt oddly stirred; there were letters downstairs, his usual books and amusements, but he felt curiously impelled to try for one more word with Miss Field.

He opened the door of Nina's room. and went in, and knocked on the halfopen door within that connected it with Harriet's room.

"Come in. Is it you, Pilgrim?" the pleasant, quiet voice said. Richard stepped to the doorway.

cipitately, and stood looking at him with widened eyes and parted lips, without speaking. She was plainly frightened, though she made herself smile. The beautiful room was full of shadows; at the wide-open windows thin curtains stirred in the cool night

"Frighten you?" Richard said. "Is there something-?" Her eyes were those of a deer that is afraid to

"Why, I wanted to suggest that we tell our little piece of news to the family," Richard suggested, after a momentary search for a suitable subject. "I came very close to telling my mother, just now. Is there any good reason for further delay?" "Why, no, I don't-I don't suppose there is!" Harriet stammered. "There will be talk." "I suppose so," he answered, simply. But what we do is our own affair, after all. I shall explain to my mother that for us both it seemed a practical and a well, not unpleasant solution. There need be no change here, but you will simply have a more assured position-"

She had been watching him, with all June in her face. But as he went on the color slowly drained away, and about her beautiful eyes a look of strain and even of something like shame gradually deepened. When she spoke, it was as if the muscles of her throat were constricted.

"Yes, I see. Certainly, I see. We will have to let them talk. This issimply the best arrangement possible under the circumstances!"

"It is an arrangement that a man perhaps has no right to ask of a woman." Richard said. "Love means a great deal in a girl's life, and I suppose there is nothing else that makes necessarily accepted Isabelle's atti- up for the lack of it. But you are not an ordinary woman, and I assure you that in every way that I can I nean to prove to you how deeply I

"Thank you!" Harriet said, almost Perhaps, if I tell my mother, you would like to write to certain friends-? You can continu to draw on the Corn Exchange, that's simplest. and I hope you'll remember that you have a large personal credit there." he added, with a smile. "It occurred to me tonight that you-you mustn't let your sister worry about that new house. If you want your own car-" "Oh, good heavens, Mr. Carter!"

Harriet said, suffocating. "Ask me anything that puzzles you," the man said. And with a brief goodnight he was gone. Harriet, who had dropped back into her chair, sat absolutely motionless for a long, long time. Her eyes were fixed on space; she hardly breathed; it almost seemed as if her heart was stopped.

Richard went downstairs, surprised to feel still vaguely unsatisfied. He had had his word with Harriet, had said indeed much that he had not expected to say. However, it was much better to let the world know their relationship; he was perfectly sattefied to have it so. But still, as he sectled himself to an hour's reading, the plaguing little impulse persisted. He would like to go upstairs again; he missed her companionship.

There was something very appealing about this woman, thought Richard, suddenly closing his book. Her beauty, her silences, her complete subjugation of her own interests to his, he found strangely fascinating.

"By George, she has made a most interesting woman of herself!" Richard decided, opening his book again. "She ought to be right in the middle of things, that girl!"

A day or two later Madame Carter came out to the terrace at eleven o'clock, beautifully groomed and gowned, and with an imperative hand arrested Harriet, who was tumbled and sunburned from the tennis court and was going toward the house.

"Just a moment, Miss Field," said she, magnificently. Harriet obediently stood still, and watched Madame Carter's magnificence settle itself slowly in a basket chair. The old lady freed an eyeglass ribbon deliberately, straightened a ruffle, laid her magazine beside her on a table. "There was a little matter of which I wished to speak to you," she said, suavely, bringing her distant glance to rest dispassionately for a moment upon Harriet's face. Harriet waited, amused, annoyed, impatient. "I understand," Madame Carter said, "that you and my son-for some reason best known to yourselves-have entered into a secret marriage?" "Your first object, my dear, is not to antagonize his mother!" Harriet reminded herself. Aloud she said mildly: "You have no reason to disbelieve it, have you?"

"No reason to disbelieve my son!" his mother echoed, scandalized, "Why should I have! Mr. Carter is the soul of honor-absolutely the soul. Upon my word, I don't understand you!" "I said you have no reason to disbelieve him," Harriet repeated. "You said that you understood that we had been married. It is true!"

And she looked off toward the river with an expression as composed as that of Madame Carter herself.

"I suppose you know that old saying: 'A secret bride has a secret to hide!" " the old woman pursued, pleasantly. "I never heard it. I did not play much with the children of the neighborhood when I was a child," Harriet answered. "My father was very anxlous to protect us from picking up expressions of that sort !"

BACK TO TENT-SKIRT DAYS?

Hoop Craze, It Is Reliably Reported, Threatens to Engulf Womankind Once More.

The jazz skirt is doomed. Those who have refrained from drinking wood alcohol for fear of going blind have no such compunction in the future. A French fashion journal says Mrs. Elizabeth Stone has returned to the hoop skirt will be all the rage within one year, writes Roy K. Moulton in the New York Mail.

The first hoop skirt was designed by Omar the Tentmaker, and the idea was later used by P. T. Barnum to house his congress of freaks and animals. So far as history goes Omar's design was first used as a skirt by the late lamented Queen Elizabeth.

When Queen Liz floated out of Windsor castle to take the air she resembled a full-rigged ship sailing before the wind, with everything working, fibs. She occupied so much territory that she had to speak in a loud tone of voice to be heard by her large circle of admirers. They used to hold the six-day bicycle races around the edge of her skirt.

SANG AS GUEST, NOT ARTIST

Jean de Reszke Accepted Remunera. tion Only When He Appeared on the Stage.

Jean de Reszke is a great gentleman, not merely as one of an ancient, historical Polish family, but in his own dignity of character and of bearing. The famous tenor, now retired, is living at Nice.

He found himself naturally at home within social portals then inaccessible to the world of artists; he was an aristocrat among the most aristocratic. He insisted on this, not blatantly, of course; he would not have been an aristocrat if he had; but in the important particular that he accepted remuneration only when he appeared on the stage; never as a guest of so-

A little anecdote of the time will 11. Instrate how De Reszke insisted on thus remaining a guest. A great financier invited him and his brother to one of his great banquets, and at the end, naturally, the artists were asked to sing. They did so. Then the host, who was generosity itself-it was, in fact, the late Alfred de Rothschildpresented them two blank checks.

Herewith a dHemma; on the one hand two proud aristocrats asked to break their rule of accepting no fee for a performance in social life, on the other an act of seeming rudeness in refusing what was meant to be a compliment from a host.

They settled the matter by accent ing the checks, and sending them beet next day blank and torn.

> "Hendrik," he said, "how many shears and clippers have you stowed below?"

> "Twenty," said the barber. "Bring them up and cut the hair of all my men, beginning here on me. There is a superstition, Hendrik, which my father used to tell me of. When storms refuse to yield to man it pleases much the gods if sailormen part with their shaggy locks. Delilah conquered Samson with the shears and we must use them now."

> Hendrik brought his clippers forth and soon the heads of all the staff were shorn. With the shearing of the hundredth sailorman the wind began to ease. When every man had parted with his hair the barber called a stewardess to his chair, but just before his clippers touched her head the furious hurricane went dead. The Bergensfjord arrived here with almost a hairss crew.

> Too Much for Airplane. Efforts to make use of airplanes for the purpose of assisting in the efforts to scale high mountains have not been attended with any great success. In the Alps the varying conditions of the snow surface has been a serious detriment to making landings and "getaways." Again, on heights above 15,000 feet the rarity of the air begins to affect the steering and control of an airplane. At 20,000 feet, pilots say, control for landing is doubtful and at still higher levels it is impossible. Of course, planes have climbed to more than 36,000 feet with the pilots kept alive by oxygen. But these have been straight up and down achievements. This is largely why the airplane idea has been given up on Mount Everest.

Caponize Your Cockerels

A capon is a castrated male bird. It an best be done when the cockere veighs about 11/2 to 2 pounds, or from to 3 months of age. It is a perfectly simple operation that any one can learn how to do in a short time without the oss of a single bird. There is some person in almost every neighborhood in Fulton county who has done it, and you an easily learn by watching them perform a few operations.

A capon will weigh from three to five bounds more at maturity than othervise. They will develop faster, their flesh is better and they will sell a good deal higher than otherwise. It is a profitable business and when it becomes la general practice among poultrymen nuch more profit will be realized.

Some Facts About Legumes

Did you know that green manure is the most profitable form of plant food? A crop of sweet clover plowed under the second year is equal to 20 tons of stable politics will find this issue dull. A crop of red whole news department of the United clover is equal to 15 tons, a crop of crimson clover to 12, a crop of Japan to 10, acrop of soybeans hogged off and the remainder plowed under is equal to 8-10 tons of stable manure per acre. A ton of stable manure is worth $5. You will never have stable manure to over your farm. You can get the same results from green manure at a very small cost. It is the only practical way to maintain our soil fertility. Leslie Nugent, in plowing under his patch of crimson clover, has added as much plant food as would have been added in 12 tons of good stable manure, and it has not cost him one-fifth as much as it would had he bought the manure and applied it. Follow his example. If you don't believe in it just watch his corn grow this year and oth-'Horseless carriages have lately been er crops that follow. Spray Your Irish Potatoes

The worst pest we have is the Colorado potato beetle. It is easily controlled by an application of arsenate of lead. For small patches it can be dusted on the potatoes through a cheese cloth. The arsenate of lead should be mixed with about four times its bulk of flour and dusted onto the leaves of the potatoes. In a large patch it should be applied with a sprayer in a liquid form, using two pounds powdered arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water.

TO MERCHANTS ON CLINTON STREET AND THE PUBLIC

The recent high water cleaned our river front thoroughly. Please see that you do all in your power to keep it so. Don't throw paper, boxes, etc., over the bank. Pile same on the front street and burn it. We have one of the best and most picturesque towns in West Tennessee or Kentucky. It is today and so rated the past fifty years the most solvent town in this section of the United States, but I must say (and to our shame) we have less civic pride than any set of people on the face of God's green earth. Wake up! Turn over a new leaf! "Get a move on yourself" and instead of doing all you can to render the old town unsightly, strive to make it "The City Beautiful." T. T. Swayne, Mayor.
